A query planner compares candidate access paths before execution.
A sequential scan reads each row, while an index scan first narrows candidate rows.
The planner uses table statistics to estimate work and choose an access path.
These notes have no author supplied chapter hierarchy.